This piece of stone, taken directly from the walls of the original Rarick Hall, serves as a reminder of the rich past history of Fort Hays State University. An important and vital part of campus life — stately old Rarick Hall commands a place in the hearts of thousands who studied within its ivy-covered walls.

The owner of this “bit of the past” is one of the many who share in the memories of that beautiful old building.

New Rarick Hall is being constructed on the same site as the former Rarick Hall and as the old makes way for the new, it is only proper that the past be preserved. With this piece of stone, the Agricultural High School, later to be known as Rarick Hall, lives on.

At Fort Hays State University we boast of a proud past — and point with pride to a promising future.
